

Riders in Kansas City deal with a specific problem: drivers do not see them. Left turns across an oncoming motorcycle, lane changes into a rider sitting in a blind spot and following distances judged for a car rather than a bike account for a large share of serious motorcycle collisions in the metro. The injuries that follow tend to be severe because there is no structure around the rider. Road rash, fractures, spinal injuries and traumatic brain injuries are common outcomes even at moderate speeds, and recovery frequently involves surgery and extended time away from work. Riders also face a bias that other injured parties do not. Adjusters, and sometimes jurors, Kansas City car attorney arrive with assumptions about how motorcyclists ride. Countering that requires evidence rather than protest, which means scene reconstruction, witness statements and a clear account of what the driver actually did.

Damage to protective gear is worth preserving too. A cracked helmet, torn leathers and scuffed boots evidence the forces involved in a way photographs of the bike do not, and they help counter the suggestion that an injury was less serious than claimed. Riders often discard damaged gear before anyone tells them not to. PK Law Group represents injured riders across Kansas City and the surrounding communities, including Overland Park, Independence and Lee's Summit. The firm handles the insurer, documents the full extent of the injuries and pursues compensation for medical costs, lost income and the longer term effects that a settlement offer made in week three rarely accounts for. Missouri does require helmet use for most riders, but the effect of that on a claim is frequently misstated by adjusters. The relevant question remains what the other driver did, and helmet related arguments generally go to the extent of head injury rather than to whether a claim exists at all. Riders should also be aware that their own uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage often becomes central, since motorcycle injuries regularly exceed the minimum limits carried by the drivers who cause them. Group rides raise their own questions where multiple riders are involved or where one rider's manoeuvre affected another. Each rider's claim is assessed individually, and accounts from those present carry particular weight given how quickly the sequence of events unfolds and how little physical evidence remains afterwards. PK Law Group Address: 2015 Grand Blvd, Kansas City, MO 64108 Phone: +1 816-450-4446 FAQ About Car Accident Lawyer Kansas City Is it worth hiring an attorney for a car accident? It is generally worth it where injuries required more than a single medical visit, where fault is disputed, or where an offer has arrived that does not cover your treatment. PK Law Group offers a free consultation at 2015 Grand Blvd in Kansas City and will tell you plainly if a claim is not worth pursuing. Because the firm works on contingency, there is no cost to find out where you stand. How long do I have to get a lawyer after a car accident? In Missouri the deadline to file a personal injury claim is generally five years from the date of the accident, while Kansas allows only two. In a metro split by the state line that distinction decides cases, so establishing which law governs is one of the first things PK Law Group does. Waiting is still unwise, because camera footage and vehicle evidence disappear long before either deadline arrives. How much does a car accident lawyer cost in Kansas City? PK Law Group works on a contingency fee, meaning nothing is paid upfront or during the case and the fee is an agreed percentage of any recovery. If the case does not succeed there is no fee at all. The structure and the deductions to expect are explained in writing before anything is signed. Call 816-450-4446 to discuss it. Is it better to settle with the insurance company or get a lawyer? Settling directly can make sense for a minor incident with no injuries. Once there is medical treatment involved, the gap between an early offer and the full value of a claim tends to widen considerably. PK Law Group takes over communication with the adjuster once instructed, which ends the direct pressure and removes the risk of an offhand remark reducing the claim. What should you not say after a car accident? Avoid admitting fault, apologising out of politeness, or stating that you are uninjured before you have been medically evaluated.

Adrenaline masks symptoms and any of those remarks will be quoted back later. Exchange details, report the crash so there is an official record, and speak to PK Law Group on 816-450-4446 before giving any recorded statement to an insurer. What should I do immediately after a car accident in Kansas City? Check for injuries and seek medical help, report the accident so a police record exists, photograph the vehicles and the wider scene, and collect witness contact details before people leave. Then get a medical evaluation the same day even if nothing hurts yet. The firm's office on Grand Blvd sits inside the downtown district where many of these collisions happen, and consultations are free. Do I have a case if I do not feel hurt? Possibly. Whiplash typically stiffens over the following 24 to 72 hours and concussion symptoms often build gradually over days. A same day medical evaluation creates the contemporaneous record that links later symptoms to the crash, which is exactly the connection insurers dispute when treatment begins two weeks afterwards. PK Law Group advises every client to be assessed regardless of how they feel at the scene. How long do most accident settlements take? Timelines vary with the complexity of the injuries and how reasonable the insurer proves to be, and rushing to close before the medical picture is clear usually costs money. PK Law Group gives clients a realistic timeline at the outset rather than an optimistic one, and keeps them updated as matters progress. Clients consistently mention that communication in the firm's Google reviews. What if the insurance company says I was partly at fault? In Missouri that does not end your claim. The state applies pure comparative fault, so an award is reduced in proportion to your share rather than barred entirely. Kansas is stricter and bars recovery at fifty percent fault or above. Because those percentages directly control the payout, PK Law Group treats the apportionment argument as central rather than incidental. What damages can I claim after a Kansas City car accident? A claim can cover medical costs already incurred and reasonably anticipated, lost income, reduced future earning capacity, vehicle damage, and non-economic damages for pain and loss of enjoyment. Reduced earning capacity is the element most often undervalued, particularly where someone returns to work but can no longer manage the physical parts of the job. PK Law Group documents both the medical and economic picture in full. What happens if the driver who hit me had no insurance? Uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage on your own policy is designed for exactly this situation and is a standard part of Missouri auto insurance. It also covers hit and run collisions where the driver is never identified. Your own insurer becomes an adverse party once asked to pay, so PK Law Group handles that negotiation on your behalf. Call 816-450-4446. Does PK Law Group offer consultations in Spanish? Yes. Attorney Phillip Strozier is fluent in Spanish and conducts consultations and case discussions directly rather than through an interpreter, which preserves accuracy when describing a collision or reviewing a settlement offer. The office at 2015 Grand Blvd is open weekdays 8am to 6pm with accessible entry and parking. Para una consulta gratuita, llame al 816-450-4446.
