

To avoid an unwanted subscription, check your gift order for recurring delivery or membership options before you pay. Read the terms beside any selected box, confirm that your cart shows a single purchase, and keep the order confirmation.

Look closely at the gift you select

Some gifts are offered as both a single purchase and a recurring delivery. Flowers, food, and other gifts may have an option to send another item every month or at another interval. The choices can appear close together, so take a moment to read the label on the option you select.

Look for words such as recurring, subscription, membership, auto renewal, or delivery every month. If the wording is unclear, read the details before adding the gift to your cart. A gift described as a subscription is meant to continue beyond the first delivery, even if the first item is the one you want to send.

Pay attention to boxes that are already selected. An added membership or recurring delivery option may be separate from the gift itself. Clear any selection you do not want, then check that your choice remains in place as you move through checkout.

Review the cart before paying

Your cart is a useful place to catch an extra item or a recurring plan. Read the names and quantities of everything listed, including any membership or service added alongside the gift. Do not rely on the picture alone to tell you what you are buying.

Before placing the order, follow these steps:

1. Check that the gift is listed as a single purchase if that is what you intend.
2. Remove any membership, subscription, or extra item you did not choose.
3. Read the delivery schedule and any renewal terms shown at checkout.
4. Check the final order summary after making changes.
5. Save the confirmation email or take a screenshot of the completed order.

If you cannot tell from the cart whether a charge will repeat, pause before paying. Contact the seller for clarification, or choose a gift with terms you can understand.

Read offers and renewal terms

A discount or trial can be appealing, but read what happens after the introductory period. Check whether accepting the offer also enrolls you in a membership, how often it renews, and how you can cancel. The relevant terms may appear beside the offer or in a separate set of conditions.

Only accept an offer if you understand and want the ongoing commitment. If you skip it, look at the final summary again to make sure the cart still contains only the gift and any delivery options you chose.

Check your confirmation and statements

After ordering, read the confirmation email for any mention of a plan, renewal date, or future delivery. Keep it with your order details so you can refer to it if something looks wrong later.

Review your payment statements for charges you do not recognize. If you find an unwanted subscription, contact the seller promptly and ask how to cancel it. Keep a record of your request and any confirmation you receive. If a charge remains in dispute, contact your payment provider about the options available to you.

A few minutes spent reading the order details can help you send the gift you intended without agreeing to a recurring purchase you did not want.
