Choosing a primary care doctor is a long-term health decision. Choosing a primary care provider advises choosing someone you work well with and asking about office hours, call returns, and patient-portal messaging.

What Primary Care Covers

Primary care supports preventive care, routine checkups, screenings, vaccines, and counseling for ongoing conditions. The CDC notes regular checkups are separate from sick visits and can catch problems early.

Services to Ask About: Internal Medicine, Geriatric Care, Mental Health, and Telehealth

Ask whether the practice offers diagnostic services, telehealth services, mental health support, geriatric care, and internal medicine.

Questions Before You Schedule Appointments

Confirm new-patient status, hospital affiliation, experience with your conditions, certifications, English and Spanish language access, and insurance such as CarePlus Medicare, Oscar Preferred Care, Humana CarePlus Medicare, or Preferred Care Partners.
